WHAT ARE THE RISKS AND WHAT COULD I GET IN RETURN?

Risk

Any investment is risky. Investments can go up as well as down in value, and an investor may get back less than what they invested. There is no guarantee that the value of an investor's securities portfolio will increase. The main risk factors that an investor may face are described below.

Liquidity Risk. The risk that any of the Fund assets (e.g., shares of a certain company) may be difficult to sell at a given time and at a reasonable price. The Baltic states exchanges have low liquidity. Specific Investment Risk. The Fund assets will be invested in the shares of companies, comprising the Index, therefore there is a risk that the fluctuations in share value of individual companies or the decrease in the entire Baltic states exchange will influence the overall performance of the Fund. Such risk is controlled following the diversification requirements set out for the Fund. Inflation Risk. It is the probability that purchasing power of monetary unit will decline in value as a result of negative influence of inflation (rise in the price of goods and services). Counterparty and Settlement Risk. When entering into transactions in securities, there is a risk that a counterparty fails to perform its obligations. Operational risk. Risk of losses arising from system failure, human error, or externalities. Investors are recommended to consult about other risks associated with investing in the Company's units, for more details look at Company's prospectus.

Category 1 does not mean that the investment has no risk. Historical data used for risk and return category assessment may not precisely indicate the potential risk of the Fund.

It is not guaranteed that the indicated risk and return category will not vary. The category may change over time.
